

INTRODUCTION	5
--------------	---

Chapter 1
HOW PSYCHOLOGY CAN CONTRIBUTE TO DEFENSIVE MEDICINE
Alessandro Antonietti, Valentina Ferraro	9
1.1. The Case of Defensive Medicine	9
1.2. Psychological Correlates of the Intention to Sue Health Professionals	11
1.3. The Role of the Outcome Bias	16
1.4. A Future Agenda	19
Appendix	21

Chapter 2
WHY ARE PEOPLE RELUCTANT TO DONATE THEIR BODY ORGANS AFTER DEATH?
Alessandro Antonietti, Valentina Rita Andolfi	23
2.1. The Resistance to Donate Organs	23
2.2. Investigating the Mental Models of Organ Donation	26
2.3. The Representation of Organ Donation	27
2.4. Conclusions	31
Appendix	33

Chapter 3
WHY IS IT MORE LIKELY THAT SOME PHYSICIANS PERCEIVE HIGHER LEVEL OF STRESS? THE ASSOCIATION BETWEEN INDIVIDUAL DIFFERENCES AND STRESS IN A GROUP OF ITALIAN PRACTICING PHYSICIANS

*Paola Iannello, Anna Mottini, Simone Tirelli, Silvia Riva,
Alessandro Antonietti* 41

3.1. The Myth of “Certainty” in Medicine: Coping with Ambiguity and Uncertainty in Medical Practice 41

3.2. Individual Differences in Ambiguity and Uncertainty
Tolerance 43

3.3. Investigating the Association between Individual
Differences in Ambiguity/Uncertainty Tolerance and Perceived Level of Stress in a Group of Physicians 44

3.4. Implications: The Association between Tolerance for Ambiguity, Stress from Uncertainty and Need for Cognitive Closure and Perceived Stress 48

Chapter 4

METACOGNITIVE COMPETENCE AS A GOAL FOR MEDICAL TRAINING

*Alessandro Antonietti, Valentina Rita Andolfi, Barbara
Colombo* 53

4.1. Impressions Are Unreliable 53

4.2. Two Systems 55

4.3. Impressions Are Not Misleading 57

4.4. Heuristics 59

4.5. Heuristics in Medical Decision Making 61

4.6. Metacognitive Skills 64

REFERENCES 67